

The QPA, in conjunction with The Institute of Quarrying and the Institute of Asphalt Technology, recommend and strongly support the following courses at the University of Derby.

In these times of economic stringency, the QPA, IQ & IAT urge all companies to maintain their support by continuing to fund new students.

'Derby' is the single major academic artery for our industry.

Other academic institutions have been lost.

Company CEOs if you want a fully competent workforce
you have a responsibility to support 'Derby'

The University of Derby has teamed up with the Institute of Quarrying to offer the first ever university level Diploma in Quarry Technology, and Diploma in Asphalt Technology.

Each aims to help those already employed in the minerals extractive industry or those with an interest in it, to gain a nationally recognised academic qualification.

Study is by distance learning, supported by weekend tutorials.

University of Derby Certificate in Ready Mixed Concrete Testing

Study is by distance learning, supported by three Saturday tutorials each year, held in Derby. Holders of this qualification are encouraged to go on to further study for either Diploma in Quarry Technology or the Diploma in Asphalt Technology, as the qualification leads to exemption from the Construction Materials module.

Materials for all three courses are currently paper-based and are fully supported by electronic access to the library and other learning resources. However, many of the learning materials will soon become available in electronic format.
